Constandinidi Gets Divorce.

London, Aug. 11.—Sir Francis Jeune, president of the divorce court, has granted D. S. Constandinidi a divorce from his wife, a daughter of Stephen Ruffin, a member of the firm of Ruffin Bros., on the ground that the latter's conduct led to the misconduct of her husband. The Constandinidi divorce suit raised the question of the legality of Dakota divorces in England, the husband having charged his wife with bigamously marrying Dr. Lance, the family physician. A jury on July 29 found against the respondent and co-respondent and awarded $125,000 damages against Dr. Lance. It also found the petitioner guilty on a counter charge.

Textile Strike Still On.

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.—Contrary to expectations no general break occurred in the ranks of the textile workers, who are on strike in this city. On Saturday last the executive board of the broad and narrow loom weavers decided to call off the strike in their branch of the industry without any concessions as to the reduction of the working hours being granted, and it was expected strikers in this branch of the trade would return to work and thus cause a break in the other branches.

She Wears No Hat.

The oriental lady wears no hat, yet fears no sunstroke. A sunshade of the proper sort is cooler than a trimmed bonnet and protects the head equally well.

The Polk Log Cabin.

The old log cabin in which was born the eleventh president of the United States, James Knox Polk, stood in Mecklenburg county, N. C., and it was from here that was issued the first declaration of independence. The Polks, or Pollocks, were of Irish stock.

Frozen, but Alive.

Mountain climbers frequently find butterflies frozen on the snow and so brittle that they break unless carefully handled. When thawed the butterflies sometimes recover and fly away.
